

CASE STUDY

A founder turned dusty blog posts into weekly carousels, the feed's top format, in 15 minutes instead of 3 hours.

THE FOUNDER

A B2B founder who knew carousels won the LinkedIn feed and posted zero, because each was a 2 to 3 hour Canva design task.

The situation

A carousel makes a reader swipe, and each swipe is dwell time, the strongest signal a feed has that content deserves more reach. A text post earns one stop of the thumb; an 8-slide carousel earns eight.

Nobody sustains 3 hours of design a week, so the highest-leverage format stayed absent.

What they did

- 1 Fed the engine content that already existed: a blog post, a long email, a voice-note transcript.
- 2 It sliced the argument into a slide arc: hook, 6 idea slides, CTA.
- 3 The locked brand template rendered the slides, on-brand every time.
- 4 Finished carousel in about 15 minutes of review, not 3 hours of design.

The result, per month

12 hours a month back, and the feed's top format weekly

The best-performing format went from absent to four a month, from content already owned.

15 min

per carousel vs 3 hours of design

4 / mo

carousels from content you already had

12 hrs

of design time bought back a month

8×

the dwell of a text post

	BEFORE	AFTER
Carousels / mo	0	4
Time / carousel	3 hrs	15 min
Format reach	low	top
Source	new work	existing

Have 10 blog posts gathering dust?

Reply "CAROUSEL" and I will show you which one converts first. Free.

REPLY CAROUSEL →anandiyer.co.in