

CASE STUDY

A founder went from invisible to daily-present on 24 hours of input a year, not more willpower.

THE FOUNDER

A founder who assumed daily-posting peers had more time, a ghostwriter, or a light calendar. The real answer was an operating system.

The situation

Daily presence looks like discipline. It is almost always a system that needs almost none of the founder's time.

The cost of staying invisible: outreach that converts worse, inbound that never starts, and never becoming the default name in the niche.

What they did

- 1

One 45-minute recorded conversation a month: interviewed about deals, mistakes, opinions and predictions.
- 2

The engine turned it into 20+ post drafts in the founder's voice.
- 3

Drafts queued for a 30-minute fortnightly review, never auto-published.
- 4

Approved posts scheduled across the month, daily presence while the founder slept.

The result, one year

Daily presence on 24 founder-hours a year

Two hours a month of input bought the default-name position in the niche.

2 hrs

total founder input a month

20+

posts a month from one conversation

default name

in the niche over a year

downstream

better outreach, inbound, hiring, valuation

	BEFORE	AFTER
Presence	sporadic	daily
Founder input	high	2 hrs/mo
Niche authority	low	default name
Inbound	none	compounding

Want the interview-to-feed pipeline?

Reply "BRAND" and I will map your OS. Free.

REPLY BRAND →

anandiyer.co.in